Environmental Management Company International, Inc. Retains ICT to Expand Operations into the GCC and Subcontinent

8 February 2006 - Environmental Management Company International, Inc. (EMCI) an innovative provider of solid waste management solutions to small and medium sized municipalities, has retained Integration Capital and Trade, Inc. (ICT), to assist in its expansion into new markets in the Middle East and South Asia. EMCI, founded in 2005 by leading environmental expert Dr. Neil D. Williams, provides a total waste management solution from curbside pickup to environmentally sound disposal and targets municipalities that are opening up their solid waste and recycling operations to private industry. ICT has been retained as financial advisor to assist EMCI in several facets of its expansion, including raising both growth and project finance capital and other business development. ICT will have an ongoing role as EMCI continues to penetrate markets in the region, including Oman, Turkey, and Pakistan, among others.

Integration Capital & Trade (ICT) is an international investment bank that provides conventional and Shari'ah solutions that bridge the gap between the capabilities of US and other Western companies and the need for Western technology and know-how to feed the rapidly growing economies of the Middle East, North Africa and South Asia.
